Associate Professor or Professor of Law

The Sandra Day O’Connor College of Law invites applications for tenured and tenure-track faculty positions at all levels. Our hiring needs are flexible, though we have a particular interest in candidates who write and teach in criminal law/procedure, antitrust, and data/cyber law or privacy law. A successful criminal law/procedure candidate may take on administrative duties in conjunction with the Academy for Justice, a new interdisciplinary, trans-institutional research center focused on studying and improving criminal justice in the United States. A successful antitrust candidate may be eligible for a named professorship.

Entry-Level Candidates—Entry-level candidates must have a J.D., Ph.D., or their equivalent in an area related to the law school curriculum, as well as a distinguished academic record. Preferred candidates will possess strong scholarly potential and a demonstrated commitment to research and teaching. The appointments committee will attend the AALS Faculty Recruitment Conference. To be considered for an entry-level position, candidates must participate in the AALS Faculty Appointments Register. We will contact selected candidates to apply and interview in Washington, D.C., or elsewhere.

Lateral Candidates—Lateral candidates must have a J.D., Ph.D., or their equivalent in an area related to the law school curriculum and experience as a tenured or tenure-track member of a law school faculty, or experience as a faculty member in a field related to law.
